

The clumsy: drops her water bottle in the quiet bit

The completely inaudible: no-one has ever heard a note from them

The chatterer: talks through rehearsals & solos

The soloist: Sings loudly and holds the final note a little longer than everyone else

The old-timer: has been singing in the choir for decades and knows how it should be done!

The too good to go to practice: only turns up at concerts and sings with all the wrong dynamics and phrasing

The rebel: looks angelic but creates havoc when the conductor is not looking

The music sorter: arranges the music during the concerts usually during solos

The newcomer: doesn't know any of the music so copies everyone else just after the beat!

The traditionalist: will not sing anything written in the last 50 years
